WAS BIDEN SLIGHTED?

The Comprehensive Agreement on Investment as a Snapshot into EU-China-US Relations on the Eve of Biden's Inauguration

BY ELIZABETH SADUSKY

After seven years of stalemated negotiations due to the EU's stance against China's forced labor camps and flagrant human rights abuses, which has hardened this year, the EU and China have finally reached a Comprehensive Agreement on Investment (CAI). Although CAI is not a trade deal, it looks to be the precursor to one. What changed to make this landmark agreement possible? It seems the answer to that question lies in the U.S. presidential election results.

THE AFTERMATH OF IRELAND'S EXPLICIT PHOTO LEAK: TECHNOLOGY, EQUALITY, AND THE LAW

BY ELSIE HALDANE

At the end of November, thousands of explicit images of women in Ireland were leaked and shared on different online forums. As a result, Irish law has changed to prohibit the sharing of explicit images without consent, but what about the situation in the rest of Europe?

WE BID VIRTUAL GOODBYE TO 2020

BY INÉS FLOR GARCÍA

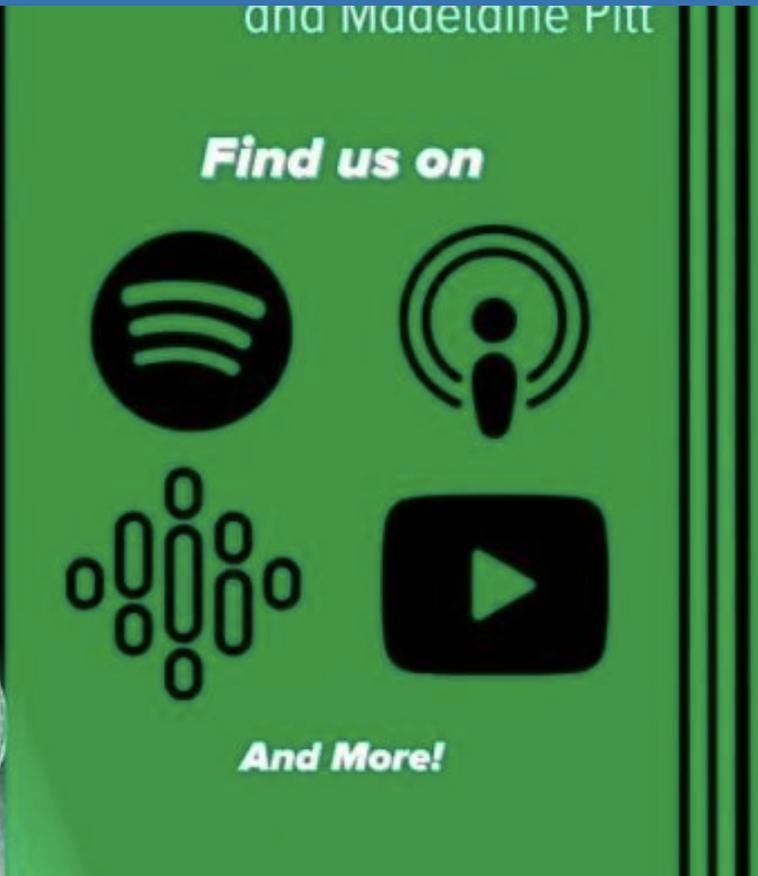

A month ago, president of France Emmanuel Macron said 2020's Christmas would have to be a "Christmas like no other". He was right. It was not a Christmas that will be easily forgotten by the generations that experienced it. It has become almost instinctive to reunite with family, friends, and loved ones during Christmas time. The act of celebrating has, in itself, transcended motives other than sharing the love. However, in 2020, Christmas was bound to be digital and for the sake of love, all of us had and still have to abide by this new standard.
